

Happy Purim!

These days should be remembered and observed in every generation by every family, and in every province and in every city. And these days of Purim should never fail to be celebrated by the Jews—nor should the memory of these days die out among their descendants. Esther 9:28

FROM THE DESK OF THE RABBI

Words Matter so DO actions. A Purim Lesson for Today

Susannah Heschel, the daughter of the late Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, remembers the following story. When she was very little, Susannah asked her father how God created the world. Rabbi Heschel told her about how God created light simply by saying, "Let there be light," about how God created plants and trees simply by saying, "Let the earth sprout vegetation," and it was so. "God," Rabbi Heschel told his daughter, "created our world...with words." Susanna questioned the answer. "When I build," she said, "I build with my blocks. When those men built our house, they used bricks and cement. Why did God create the world with words?" His answer, "to teach us an important lesson: Just as God created our world with words, our words create worlds, too. So we must use our words very carefully. Kind words create a kind world, but mean words create a mean world."

No matter who we are, our words have tremendous power. What we say can transform someone's day...and, sometimes, even their whole life. We can either say things that build people up, that encourage them or we can say things that destroy them. The book of Proverbs teaches us, "harsh words strike at us like swords." Words, like weapons, have the power to destroy and words also have the power to build.

Words have power. When evil Haman in Megillat Esther that we read on Purim speaks, he speaks denigrating words, in this case about the Jewish people. "There is one nation," he said, "scattered throughout the kingdom, which is different from all other nations. They don't eat our food, drink our wine. Because they are different, because they came from somewhere else and keep to themselves, because they speak a different language, and don't blend in, they must be destroyed. If you give me permission, I will destroy them for you." And you know what? No one spoke up. Everyone was so afraid to speak the power of truth. Even the King went along with the plan. When the evil words were not confronted, it was on its way to leading to terrible action.

Well, actually someone had the courage to speak it. Or really, two someones. They were Mordechai and Esther -and thank G-d for that. Without them, we would not be here today. Mordechai learned of the plan and went to Esther, who was in enough of a position to make her voice known. Yet, even then, she hesitated! Like most people, she was afraid of the powerful Haman, second only to the King. Mordechai prodded her, "It was for this very reason that you are in the position to make your voice heard. Now is the time!" Esther gained the courage to speak up; to defend herself and the Jewish people from the evil words and evil planned actions of Haman. It was her voice, backed by Mordechai's encouragement, that not only saved the Jewish people, but, by eliminating Haman's hateful words and plans, put the Kingdom of Shushan back on track too.

As we enter the Purim season, this story and its lessons still speak to us. The power of words, the power of courage, the power of action. We need that today too!

Cantor's Notes

Tu B'Shevat

"Trees don't want to be planted in the summer!"

"When do they want to be planted?"

"Around Tu B'Shevat!"

I overheard this exchange recently at a gathering of Jewish educators. It struck me as both quite true and a bit amazing that I had never found myself thinking about Tu B'Shevat from the perspective of the trees themselves, in the sense that they themselves may have preferences.

There are only two seasons in Israel: wet and dry. It's one thing to know this, but quite another to experience it. The year I spent in Israel as a student, I arrived in June, and it wasn't until late July that I finally realized the strangest thing about being there was that so many days and then weeks had gone by without a single cloud in the sky or a drop of rain. Certainly a contrast to summers in the Northeast US. Then, just after Sukkot, the clouds rolled in and hung there, and the rain poured down followed by heavy, wet snow -- unusual, but that winter of 2002-2003 was a dramatic one in Jerusalem. Despite the rain, trees shouldn't yet be planted in the fall or early winter in the wet season, because the soil, had been so dried out by the long summer that it takes a couple of months of regular rainfall before it is saturated enough for the tree roots to take hold. Hence, as the speaker I overheard a few days ago said, "the trees don't want to be planted until the right time of year, when the soil is wet enough for their new roots and there is still more rain to come over the next few months before the dry season sets in." If they are planted too early in the season, then the soil is still too dry and they won't survive. If they're planted too late in the season, summer will come before their roots have gotten the chance to dig deep enough for the water that remains below the surface, and they won't survive that either. So there's a very specific window in the land of Israel that makes for the best planting time to grow healthy trees.

The concept of Tu B'Shevat itself derives directly from specific directions in the Torah that when a tree reaches a certain age, its first fruits must be offered at the Temple in Jerusalem. The following year, the fruit of that tree may be eaten. This meant that at the time of the Temple, those who grew fruit trees were responsible for keeping track of the age of each one. The concept of establishing a specific date for the activity, not just of planting the trees, but also of counting each one to be a year older comes from the Talmud, which gave practical instructions to be able to fulfill the mitzvah as outlined in the Torah. It is probable that those living in the land of Israel for generations had already settled on the month of Shevat as the best time of year to plant trees, based on the weather and soil patterns. The 15th of every Hebrew calendar month is naturally the full moon (as the first of the month is always a new moon), so it makes sense that the 15th was established as the correct date for planting, when the soil is finally saturated and the moon is bright. The word "Tu" in our "Tu B'Shevat" comes from the Hebrew letters that make up "15": tet = 9 and vav = 6. Put those together with a dot in the vav, and you get the sound "tu".

I love pieces of Jewish-based agricultural wisdom like this. Most of our mitzvot, our commandments and traditions, are based on Jewish values that guide us to be good people through setting standards for our interactions with other human beings, or giving us directions on how to keep an awareness of God in our lives. Although the origins of Tu B'Shevat derive from instructions in the Torah related to sacrifices made to God in the temple, and directions found in the Talmud on correct ways to keep track of the trees in order to fulfill this mitzvah, the planting of trees in the right season is an example of how our Jewish traditions pervade not only the realm that we might designate as "religious", but every aspect of our daily lives, including sensible and responsible stewardship of the earth, with an awareness of what trees want.

May you have a sweet and fruitful Tu B'Shevat!

The Meaning of Time

Amongst all of the psalms, Psalm 90 is attributed not to David but to Moses.

In verse 10 we find the adage: "The days of our years are three score and ten; four score if granted the vigor."

So from Moses (at 120) who stood on the mountaintop and saw the land that his people were about to go into, 70 seems to be a shortened existence. Maybe yes, but then again, maybe not.

As I write this, I am just weeks away from joining the three score and ten generation. I titled this article, "The meaning of time," because the natural instinct at this age is to reflect on the years past and what they have meant.

To me, time is not the full measure of a person's life but only a component. Jim Croce in his tome-poem, Time in a bottle said, "If I had a box just for wishes. And dreams that had never come true..."

A bottle, a box, an entire universe could contain our stored existence. But to what end?

A life should be bettered measured by quality rather than just quantity. Memories are wonderful but experience is what makes life worth living. Just imagine having that one "Aha" moment like Einstein and E=MC2 compared to the insanity of people screaming at each other in the name of politics.

Quality versus quantity. See what I mean.

Yes, I am turning 70, but more and more that is only a number. I have so much more to learn and experience no matter how many years I am granted on this earth.

I will share with you one thing that I have learned and have taken to heart more and more in the last decade or so. In 2007, Rabbi David Golinkin was our esteemed Scholar-in Residence. On the Saturday evening event for patrons at the home of Shelley Lankowsky and Sergio Bienstock, Rabbi Golinkin introduced me to a word whose meaning has been resonating in me for years. The word is Shalva (from the same root as Shalom) and is roughly translated as calmness, serenity, tranquility, peace.

In this world of noise, distraction and meaningless chatter, I was inspired by that evening to write a poem entitled Stillness (Shalva). I would like to share with you some excerpts. Although written ten years ago it is all too pertinent today.

In the cluttered, bustle of life's realistic bent, I am in quest of stillness.

Not the quiet, echoless byproducts of empty, hollow passing fancies do I seek.

No, my stillness is rich and full-bodied like an amber ale playfully biting on my tongue.

Truly exquisite is my solitude, Walden's cabin built in the mind of a true believer.

In the blackness of the night lit by a blanket of stars I have felt that stillness

In the moments before it is time to recite the Shema I have felt that stillness

Before an open Ark, I am transfixed as the congregation intones Etz Chaim Hi

My breath exhales in a single stream of desire for the transcendent Hadesh Alenu Ke'kedem

I am compelled to follow its course.

For yesterday is the grounding of all experience and the future is replete with possibility.

In deepest solitude exists the very essence of my bliss and the touch of angels.

It is the makom of hidden Stillness.

I shout without sound and utter in wordless joy-

O source of Peace, bestower of Stillness and guardian of Shalva.

My birthday wish for all of you is the time and health to live a Meaningful Life.

Gerry

Mishloach Manot and Purim Fundraiser

Shalom, congregants and friends!

One of the mitzvot of the Purim holiday is the sending of food to other Jewish people. This act, called Mishloach Manot or "sending of portions," references a section of the Book of Esther where Jews refuted Haman's accusation that the Jews were "a scattered, and divided people" and demonstrated by sending portions that they were, in fact, united.

The Purim basket program (Mishloach Manot) is one of MJCBY's largest fundraisers which supports all of our great programs, so in the spirit of a united MJCBY congregation, please consider participating in one or more of the following ways:

- 1) Send to the entire congregation: $154
- 2) Send to individual congregants and/or teachers who you select: $12 per address
- 3) Send to college students and non-congregant family and friends: $36 per address - includes shipping
- 4) Buy hamantaschen by the pound: $12 per pound
- 5) Buy Green's Chocolate Babka (16 oz): $8 each

Baskets will be delivered to your home between February 12th and 28th. Please let us know if you may be away, and/or if you would prefer that your basket be donated to a local nursing home.

An order form is on the next page. To send to individual congregants, please list the names of those people on the order form. If you are sending to college students and non-congregant family and friends, don't forget to fill out the enclosed gift tags and mailing labels (see below).

Payment and orders are due February 7, 2018. Please make all checks payable to MJCBY and put "Purim" on the memo line. Mindfulness: Part 2 "Listen and You Will Be Heard"

Sunday, February 4 - 10:00a.m.

Listening is a precious gift. Whether with your child, spouse, friend, co-worker, or just the person in front of you at the supermarket, the more time you take to understand them, the more effective you will be in communicating with them. Rather than focusing on what to say, try focusing on what you will hear. Once someone feels heard, they will then be ready to listen to you.

Our guest for the morning, Julie Kantor has a doctorate in clinical psychology and has been an executive coach, trainer and facilitator for over 20 years. She brings her expertise in communication, family dynamics, leadership and interpersonal relationships to help people communicate more effectively. Her goal is for each of you to have some fun and walk away with new ways to communicate.

This program welcomes women of all ages. Everyone will benefit from the experience, connect with friends and meet new members.

USY and Kadima Stuff

Usy: Our USY chapter has had some great activities these past few months. From a bedouin tent movie night, to a competitive GaGa tournament, we always know how to have fun!

Our chapter board has been busy putting together the 2018 calendar with some awesome events such as, IDF training and even a fiesta!

USY provides a great opportunity to not only see all your friends, but also to learn new jewish customs and get together with other jewish teens just like you.

It is never too late to join USY. We have so many exciting events coming up and we want you to be there!

Don't miss the next opportunity! Our next event is Cupcake Wars on February 11th from 6:30-7:45pm.

Rachel Levy
MJCBY USY Membership Vice President

Kadima: Hi Everyone! As we settle into what I'm sure will be a happy New Year, I'd like to take a moment to review our Kadima fun so far! We've had a number of great events, ranging from a movie night, to team based games and competitions, to cupcake wars. Kadimaniks have had a chance to meet new friends (sometimes even saying hello to the USY'ers), spend time with old ones, and share laughs along the way. We start each event with fun "get to know each other" activities, so even if we haven't had the chance to meet yet, new faces are always welcome and always leave with a smile!

We're looking forward to continuing the fun, and our next event will be Sunday, February 11 from 6:30-7:45! Looking forward to seeing you all there and wishing you a happy Tu B'Shvat!

Religious School News

MJCBY Religious School is all about HINEINI, using Jewish spiritual wisdom to lead your children in becoming more present, centered & engaged for life! A line from our prayer book serves as a launching point for mitzvah motivated activities, & as a form of kavannah (mindful & intentional directive), focusing us on the activity we are about to perform. "I am ready to fulfill this commandment." During Kehillah on Wednesdays & Sundays, our children learn to transition from the secular (ordinary, routine) to the sacred. Learning that blessings are our Jewish intention to look for & make the ordinary special, many are spoken aloud. By speaking some of our prayers aloud, we hear what our hearts intend, we center ourselves & each other before adding light to the world through deeds.

What can we do to perform such mitzvot, good deeds we are commanded to do? Torah speaks of Moses taking off his shoes before approaching the burning bush & encountering God. The Israelites had to wash & disengage from routine activities, so they could focus before receiving Torah at Sinai. Some people prepare for special moments with silence. Others prepare with music. Some study, while others pray.

How do you as parents prepare yourselves for the gifts of our teachings brought home by our students? The Learner's Minyan, led by Cantor Shana, is a wonderful way to grow understanding about our prayers through Keva (prescribed order of set prayers as determined by Rabbis) & through Kavannah (engaging heart & mindfulness to recite prayers with intention). Recent participation of Religious School parents who asked questions about our siddur & flow of services was affirmation, that our congregation is a dynamic family of some who prefer traditional & others who would like more guided readings during services. There are many ways to approach our prayers & traditions.

In Who Is Man,? Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschl writes, "Remember that life is a celebration or can be a celebration. One of the most important things is to teach people how to celebrate." Rabbi Heschl suggests that when we look for milestones to mark special moments in our lives, we stop, pause & reflect on growth & our efforts are put into perspective. We think where we are today, how far we have come, & plan ahead. We are fortunate to get to "stop, pause & reflect" each Shabbat. Seeing parents with arms wrapped around their children's shoulders during services, beaming with pride when their child is on the bima, or role playing a parsha, lead to remembering, keeping & ensuring that MJCBY Religious School is an enduring gift for all who engage.

The month ahead has opportunities for all to experience HINEINI through your choice of Keva (prescribed order), Kavannah (with mindfulness & personal intention), or both! Consider your participation as the gift you give yourselves and your children. Come to one event, or sign up for many...strengthen your roots and connections. Get centered at MJCBY!

SOPHIA FERRARA

We welcome the congregation to join us on Saturday, March 3, 2018 when our daughter, Sophia, will be called to the Torah as a Bat Mitzvah.

Sophia is a hard-working seventh grader at Randolph Middle School. Outside of school, Sophia enjoys lacrosse, acting classes at the Morristown Performing Arts Center, art classes at Artworks Studio and spending time with her friends.

Sophia is a truly kind and loving person and nothing is more important to her than her friends and family. She is most happy when surrounded by her siblings at the kitchen table or at family gatherings with her grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins. Traditions are an important and treasured component of her life.

For her Mitzvah project, Sophia chose to twin with a Holocaust survivor. She felt it was important to carry on the stories of strength and courage of this tragic time in our history. She has been honored and humbled to meet with Olga Menczer, whose warmth, humor and zest for life is incredible and inspiring. Sophia has learned so much from this experience – not just about the Holocaust, but about the strength of family bonds, friendship, the human spirit and the power of attitude.

Our family wishes to thank the entire MJCBY staff and clergy for their support in helping Sophia reach this milestone. Sophia's brothers, Marcus and Gabe, sister Chloé, grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins, friends and of course us, her parents, are so proud of how hard she has worked to reach this day and we look forward to celebrating with our lovely and sweet Sophia.
